WHAT IS EARTHSCHOOLING?

Earthschooling is a complete, flexible, and secular Waldorf-inspired curriculum based on learning through nature, real-life experiences, natural rhythms, hands-on activities, storytelling, painting, and handwork with natural fibers.

Using the Waldorf curriculum as its framework, Earthschooling provides complete lesson plans, instructional videos, and core curriculum created by certified Waldorf teachers, fulfilling the requirements of a Waldorf education.

Earthschooling also includes curriculum alignment with core standards for your location, teacher-support tutorials, eurythmy lessons, and weekly live Q&A sessions with an experienced, certified Waldorf teacher.

OTHER BENEFITS OF EARTHSCHOOLING

- Administrative Support

We provide charts and information showing how our curriculum aligns with the core curriculum requirements of your state or country. We can also provide transcripts and graduation certificates for each grade. Certified teachers are available for consultation and additional support.

- Support for Diverse Cultures and Locations

Earthschooling provides enrichment lessons reflecting different languages, cultures, and religions, as well as alternative stories for members who wish to substitute particular lesson blocks. We also support Southern Hemisphere members and families living in regions where the seasons differ from those traditionally reflected in Waldorf curriculum materials.

- Parent Support

If you are running an early childhood program, school, or enrichment program, we provide a comprehensive handout packet for parents to help them understand the educational approach and style of learning their child will experience with the curriculum.

BENEFITS OF EARTHSCHOOLING

Earthschooling is a well-established curriculum provider and was the first Waldorf-inspired curriculum to offer online lesson blocks. It remains the only Waldorf curriculum to offer eurythmy lessons alongside extensive teacher training and support in watercolor painting, handwork, chalk drawing, and block crayons. Earthschooling also offers Living Lessons, with complete lesson blocks taught on video by experienced Waldorf teachers across most grades.

FLEXIBILITY IN STYLE

We make it easy for members to mix and match lessons and educational approaches to meet their individual needs. We welcome families and teachers from a wide range of educational backgrounds, including Waldorf, Montessori, natural learning, and unschooling. Although Earthschooling was originally designed as a Waldorf homeschooling curriculum, it has expanded over the years and is now used by public, Montessori, and Waldorf schools worldwide.

A REAL CONNECTION WITH NATURE

We go beyond nature walks and natural materials to help you bring nature into the learning environment in meaningful ways. This includes weekly nature-walk themes for early childhood, herbal identification in the middle grades, and local animal monitoring for older students, along with many other nature-based learning experiences. Earthschooling truly helps you make the earth your classroom. Our teachers and staff include herbalists, ecologists, and wildlife biologists.

POSITIVE COMMUNITY SUPPORT

Whatever educational approach you use, you will find a positive and supportive community where members can exchange ideas and discover their own unique approach to education. Our discussions focus on encouragement, practical ideas, and positive support rather than prescribing what families or teachers “should” be doing.

REAL-LIFE SOLUTIONS

We understand that some children come to Earthschooling from public schools or other educational settings, and that many parents and teachers are working with multiple children at the same time. We help you balance each student's individual needs, create a schedule that works for your family or classroom, and recognize that every student develops and learns differently.
